LANGUAGE

Difficulties in understanding what is said and expressing yourself can greatly impact your ability to participate in day-to-day activities. A Speech Pathologist can help you to improve your use and understanding of language.

COMMUNICATION

Communication is the way in which we share information, whether this be by speaking, writing, gesture or with a computer. A Speech Pathologist can help you find the method of communication that best suits you and allows you to most effectively achieve your goals.

FLUENCY

Stuttering is when the flow of speech becomes disrupted by uncontrolled repetition or prolongation of sounds, words or phrases

SPEECH

Difficulties with producing the sounds necessary for speech can be addressed to assist in helping you to be better understood by those around you.

Treatment addresses your control of your speech, teaching you to re-structure the way in which speech is produced to reduce the impact of stuttering, and helping you feel more in control.

SWALLOWING

The same system used in speaking is also involved in swallowing, and a Speech Pathologist can therefore also help you to improve your enjoyment and safety when eating and drinking.

VOICE

A Speech Pathologist can evaluate changes and difficulties experienced with how your voice sounds.
